Belgian rock for Grammy Awards

b-SHAKE, a young Belgian pop-rock band lives a great experience these last days. The band has been selected for the upcoming Grammy Awards event. They have been selected among nearly 200 other acts from all over the world.

b-SHAKE competes with huge artists nowadays. You can see the band appear on the official Grammys ballot along with acts like Coldplay, Franz Ferdinand, U2 and many more. The band will represent Belgium in two categories: "Best performance in a duo or band with vocals" and "Best Rock Song".

« It's completely unbelievable! We never expected to be selected for such a huge international event. And what's really pleasant is that b-SHAKE is probably the first Belgian artist on Grammys ballot! », says Malik Alimoekhamedov, the front man of the band. « It all came true because of « Big Noise Now », a USA based company which collaborates with b-SHAKE in order to give it all the necessary exposure in United States and even further. These guys introduced and supported our act for Grammys. »

The votes to select 5 final nominees in each category started this month for all members of National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences. The final results are expected really soon.

b-SHAKE is a trio created by Malik Alimoekhamedov (guitars, vocals), Régis Vanderslyen (bass) and Augustin Hennecker (drums). Coming from Uzbekistan Malik founded the band which aims to mix several streams of rock music worldwide and his oriental origins. Since the beginning of its existence b-SHAKE participated and won several contests, joined track lists of different compilations, released a lot of original material, has been used for soundtracks and played a huge amount of shows.
